New Building to Embody Spirituality and Values

The Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values, a non-denominational facility which promises to further strengthen UT students’ academic and personal development, will soon be a reality.

The project, which includes a 250-seat main hall, meeting and meditation rooms, pipe organ, a plaza and 60-bell musical sculpture/fountain, is being built through a multi-million dollar lead gift from John H. and Susan Sykes. The total project is valued at $19.5 million.

“This is a stunning project that has been in our hearts and minds for more than a decade,” said John H. Sykes, a longtime benefactor who is the namesake of the John H. Sykes College of Business. “At the project’s foundation is the development of the minds and spirit of young people for generations to come.”

Vaughn said the Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values will continue the transformation of the campus and further enrich the educational environment and experience.

“We are grateful to the Sykes for their gift that we believe will aid in students’ own discovery and development processes and support the study of world religions,” Vaughn said. “Universities have a key opportunity to support such student development, and now UT will be a model in this endeavor.”

The Chapel/Center is part of UT’s master plan, which was approved in 1996. Part of the former fairgrounds building has already been demolished for the project, and a groundbreaking is set to occur on the site on campus in October.

The planned 12,750-square-foot, 65-foot vaulted, east-west oriented facility will be situated in the center of campus — just north of North B Street across from Brevard Hall. The building uses natural light as a primary design focus and will include architectural elements constructed of red brick, laminated timber, glass, granite, zinc roofing and decorative red cherry millwork.

The Chapel/Center will include a main hall, meeting rooms, two meditation rooms, a foyer and vestibule. It is designed to seat 250 people in movable seating for spiritual programs, speaking engagements, seminars, ceremonies, meetings and concerts.

Construction of the facility is tentatively scheduled to be completed by January 2010.

Stephanie Russell Holz, director of Office of Student Leadership and Engagement, said the programming opportunities connected with the Sykes Chapel are limitless.

“Programming plans will continue to be developed along with the facility’s construction,” said Holz. “But at this point I see the potential for a wide spectrum of character- and value-building programs that will benefit a wide range of students on campus.”

At present, UT has 10 student organizations that focus on religious issues and spiritual development.

“I think that the project will definitely benefit all students no matter what their faith,” said Kimberly Fogelman, a University of Tampa graduate student. “Even if students never share their beliefs out loud, they will know another aspect of the University, which will now encompass mind, body and soul.”

The acoustically-superior building will include a 45-foot tall, 3,184-pipe custom-built organ and a 75-foot outdoor musical sculpture/fountain to be built after the Chapel/Center is completed.

The Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values will represent the eighth completely new building on UT’s campus in the past decade.

The Grand Musical Sculpture

The unique musical sculpture is a 75-foot lighted structure adorned with 60 bells. The entire structure is integrated as part of a plaza and water fountain.

Chapel/Center to Anchor UT’s Modern Campus

The Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values represents a center point to the transformation of the UT campus. UT’s projected growth to 6,000 students by 2010 and approximately 6,500 in another decade will require new academic buildings, parking facilities, student centers and an expanded library.

The above campus master plan — with the Sykes Chapel in the center — is a recent blueprint of what the campus might look like in the future. According to President Vaughn, the master plan represents future construction that will “house new programs, improve the learning experience and add value to the education offered to our students.

“We must continue bringing the quality of our campus in line with the quality of our education,” Vaughn said.

The new construction will be heavily influenced by the traditional styles and architecture dominant on campus — starting with the landmark Plant Hall — and will reinforce UT’s position as a prestigious, metropolitan, residential learning institution.

For more information about UT’s achievements and future, see the annual report on pages 40-45.

Building Character

The Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values, which is set to be completed in January 2010, will provide interior and exterior spaces for students to worship, meditate, study and gather.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW OF THE UNIVERSITY’S MASTER PLAN
A Hotel of a Different Color

After several decades and 18 layers of paint, professional painters are returning Plant Hall to its original glory. Rather than cream, the trim will now be a greenish gray, light grayish olive and a dark bluish gray. The carved crescent moons will be painted with metallic paint. These colors are representative of Plant Hall’s color scheme from 1892-1920, according to Cynthia Gandee, executive director of the Henry B. Plant Museum. The paint chronology investigation was completed by a team of architects, who investigated photographs and analyzed paint chips to determine the original color scheme and the chronology of paint jobs.

The cost of the project is approximately $465,000, and is being paid for by the Plant Hall Preservation Trust Fund, which is funded in equal parts by UT and the city of Tampa.

Making the World a Greener Place

The University will host the Earth Charter Climate Change Community Summit on Oct. 11. The summit will highlight sustainability initiatives in business, education and government, and will be webcast from more than 30 locations worldwide.

Alexander Likhota, president and CEO of Green Cross International and advisor to Mikhail Gorbachev, founder of Green Cross, will be among the event’s speakers.

On Oct. 10, UT will host the first-ever Earth Charter Sustainable Business Awards of Tampa Bay luncheon, at which 16 Tampa Bay-area businesses that are leading the commitment to social, economic and environmental responsibility will be recognized. A group of UT graduate students helped coordinate the event and established criteria for the awards. For more information on both events, visit www.earthcharterus.org.

Engaging Student Leaders

For years the Student Activities Office has been offering much more than parties to UT students. Now, they have a name to reflect that. The office will now be known as the Office of Student Leadership and Engagement. The new name emphasizes the outcomes of participation in programs, rather than the activities themselves, and highlights the holistic development of students. It also helps students think critically about the skills they are learning from their involvement and how those skills can be marketed to future employers and graduate schools.

“This philosophy deepens the connection between what students learn in the classroom and how they can apply that learning outside of the classroom,” said Stephanie Russell Holz, director of the Office of Student Leadership and Engagement. “A student might use classes in their marketing major to help them design publications or create a Web site to market an event they are planning.”

UT Sees Gains in Applications, Enrollment, Selectivity

UT has set another record for number of students. This year’s total — including graduates and undergraduates — is 5,790, up 3.3 percent from last year’s total of 5,601. This year’s total enrollment is almost twice UT’s enrollment of 3,028 students 10 years ago.

The breakdown is as follows:

▲ Total undergraduate enrollment rose to 5,120, a 4.6 percent increase from last year.
▲ Graduate students now number 670.
Nearly all U.S. states are represented in the mix of undergraduates.
Approximately 50 percent of all UT students hail from Florida — and more than half of those are from Hillsborough and Pinellas counties.

Ninety-two percent of UT undergraduate students are full-time and of the full-time undergraduates, approximately 70 percent live on campus. Students are housed in 10 different residence halls all built or renovated since 1998.

This year’s entering class consists of 1,601 new students. The University continues to be selective, this year accepting only 49 percent of its first-year applicants. Twenty percent of the new students were eligible for the University’s distinguished Honors Program, and 10 percent are international.

“UT has done a good job communicating with students and parents about the value of a quality private education,” said Barbara Strickler, vice president for enrollment.

President Ronald Vaughn said the University’s growth shows the strong position UT has in providing students a top-notch education in a vibrant, yet intimate, academic setting.

“More and more students are choosing The University of Tampa not only for the excellent education it offers, but also for the outstanding overall experience,” Vaughn said. “UT is a place where students can enjoy learning and living.”

“His horizons were focused fairly narrowly when he came to UT,” says Dr. Richard Piper, director of the Honors Program from 1996 to 2008. “He was a good student, but one who had felt somewhat unappreciated. And I think he’s really flourished in the honors program. I’ve seen a development of self confidence, a development of broader goals, and a more sophisticated understanding of himself and his potential.”

The Honors Program has been offering opportunities to students like Connally for 26 years, and today it is a much sought after program for incoming students. Students are chosen from the incoming class by their GPAs and SAT scores, and as the University has grown more selective, so has the Honors Program. Admission requirements to the program have been raised five times since it started in 1982.

The program has evolved from humble beginnings, and it continues to provide opportunities for top UT students. This fall the University will offer 21 Honors courses, a far cry from the first four offered 26 years ago.

Bold Beginnings

Nearly three decades ago, Tim O’Connor ’81 asked his English professor to teach a course with him over the summer. That professor was Dr. Frank Gillen, Dana Professor of English and the editor of the Pinter Review. Gillen became the first director of the Honors Program at UT in 1986.

“I was amazed at how good he was,” Gillen says of O’Connor. “There were a lot of other students like that, and I felt we needed some way of bringing those students together.”

Out of Gillen’s experience, and others like it, the faculty at UT created an honors program. But the orga-
In those early years, before there was an Oxford semester, Gillen and his late wife, Marie, took students to London. Now a University trustee, Joe Wessel ’95 went on one of those trips. He also worked for three years in the Honors Program Office.

“It was such a privilege working for and traveling with Frank,” Wessel says. “He truly was the architect of the program — he did everything from gaining funding, designing courses, and recruiting and retaining students and faculty — all while teaching and remaining the leading authority on Pinter.”

Attracting Top Talent

A majority of Honors students say they chose to come to UT because of the Honors Program. The unique opportunities offered in the Honors Program lure students away from Florida’s state schools and some of the big Northern universities (see sidebar).

Despite these strict standards, a higher proportion of Honors students attend UT than at many other schools. UT has 970 students in the program, nearly one fifth of the students enrolled at the University. Last fall, 22 percent of the students were eligible for the University’s distinguished Honors program.

Once they’re in the classroom, these students set the tone for their peers.

“And the other students are aware of that and they become a little bit more serious and a little bit more purposeful in their studies because of the caliber of the good students in that room,” says Dr. Gary Luter, the new director of the Honors Program.

Changing the Students

Luter lauded Piper on his ability to spot students with potential.

One example is Connally. The criminology and government and world affairs double major spent the summer filing subpoenas, reading cases and witness statements, and talking strategy with his supervisors. He has met with the district’s police chief and attorney general. This fall, Connally will study the philosophy of law and international law in Oxford University.

“Charlie is one of a number of such cases where I’ve really

Nicole Ortega — Prattville, Al

As one of three summa cum laude graduates in the Class of 2008, Nicole Ortega’s list of academic achievements is eye-catching even compared to those of her fellow Honors students. A double major in marine science and marine biology with a minor in chemistry, Ortega has received numerous academic awards and honors throughout her time at UT. The list includes, most recently, the outstanding senior in biology and life sciences award from the College of Natural and Health Sciences.

In her senior year, Ortega spearheaded a research assistantship concerning the exchange of parasites between Cuban treefrogs, an invasive species to Florida, and the native amphibians. Her presentation of the research earned her an award earlier this year from the Florida Academy of Sciences in Jacksonville, FL.

“She’s just exceptional all around,” said Dr. Wayne Price, Dana Professor of Biology, who supported Ortega’s research. “There is no doubt that she is one of the best students I’ve had in class and as a research assistant in my more than 30 years of experience.”

Upon receiving her degrees, Ortega plans to continue her research with Price while exploring the possibility of teaching high school-level chemistry classes. She also plans to pursue a master’s degree in parasitology.

Adam Kemp — Mexico Beach, Fl

Arriving at UT as a transfer student in his junior year, Adam Kemp quickly joined the Honors Program and also quickly made the most of what it had to offer. In his two years at UT, Kemp twice attended the Harvard Model United Nations as well as the Southern Regional Honors Conference. Both experiences, he said, greatly enhanced the value of the education he received in the classroom by putting him in touch with fellow Honors students and other high caliber individuals from all over the country.

Time spent studying abroad in Germany, Austria and the Czech Republic also provided a unique global perspective to his studies as a double major in finance and international business.

“Adam exemplifies what we want in our students at UT,” said Cheri Etling, associate professor of finance. “He not only works hard to learn the concepts and skills for himself, he is also willing to work patiently with other students to help them master the information as well.”

A magna cum laude graduate, Kemp was one of two student speakers at UT’s commencement. A member of the Beta Gamma Sigma business honor society and recipient of an award for outstanding graduate in international business, Kemp’s post-graduation plans will take him for five months to Milwaukee, WS, for training with Marshall and Ilsley Bank. He will then be assigned to the bank’s Sarasota branch as a business banker. Plans to pursue an MBA and a law degree are also on the distant horizon, he said.

seen positive change in a student in his or her years in the Honors Program,” Piper says.

Spreading the Good News

Students like Connally can show off their research in publications in the peer-reviewed journal Respondex, and in their performances at conferences and state and national awards, which all enhance the reputation of the University.

Two students won awards for their writing at the Florida Collegiate Honors Council Conference last spring, where a new scholarship in Piper’s name was announced. One was selected to sit on the executive board of the conference for this year, and two others presented their work.

One way the Honors Program adds to the reputation of the University is by attracting and retaining high-quality faculty. Luter says one of the reasons he has involved with the program was as a service to the faculty. He had such a good experience teaching inquisitive and intelligent students, he wanted the entire faculty to have the same experience.

The Honors courses allow faculty to create and teach advanced courses that may not be taught at the undergraduate level. Each course is designed around one of four variations on the theme Challenging Mindsets. For instance, Dr. Ray Schlueter and Dr. Mason Meers took 14 students on a trip of the Amazon River Basin to study tropical biology and conservation.

Opportunities for the Future

As the new director, Luter is looking for ways to enhance the Honors Program experience. He would also like to highlight the international aspects of the program, such as the Oxford Semester, the Harvard Model UN, an international lecture series, and the Timothy Smith Award, which provides students with money for international travel.

He expressed interest in a named program or scholarship, or a dedicated classroom space for the program. Some residence halls have designated “Honors floors,” but Luter says an Honors residence hall may help contribute to the sense of community. He would also like to see more non-traditional, adult students get involved, he said, to reflect changing student demographics. It is now a trend for honors programs to seek accreditation through the National College Honors Council.

Whether it started as part of a trend, the University of Tampa’s Honors Program has proved it has staying power, and it will continue to challenge students and prepare them for an ever-changing world, and increase UT’s reputation as an academic powerhouse.

“You have to have a very inquisitive and academically focused student body if you are going to have a great reputation as an institution,” Luter says. “The Honors Program provides that.”

"They don’t have much, but they always want to share with me."
— Jessica Orlando ’07

“So it shouldn’t come as much of a surprise that I feel drained right about now,” she wrote in a letter home to her family.

Jessica Orlando ’07 is getting the most out of her experience as a Peace Corps volunteer in Malawi, in southern Africa.

S he is conversational in a language she had never even heard of, taught biology to 70 students in a classroom with nothing but a chalkboard, said goodbye to two volunteers in her group who decided it wasn’t for them, and held conversations about human nature, development, the western world, and the unexpected appreciation for everything back home.

“A Humbling Experience

After five months in Malawi, Orlando said she is humbled by her role in the country’s development. Orlando is teaching near the capital, but there are no paved roads, so she said it takes three hours by bike to travel to the nearby trading center.

Her house has five rooms, a tin roof, a garden and an outdoor toilet, kitchen and bathing room. It is on church grounds and is a 10-minute walk from her school. There are 200 students at the school where Orlando teaches biology, physical science and life skills.

“Teaching is challenging, but I see it as the most rewarding aspect of my service and a time when I truly feel useful and needed,” she says. “It isn’t about the material I am teaching — anyone could write the notes out for them. It is the way I find myself encouraging them, challenging them, and showing them that they are worthwhile human beings and that there is nowhere I would rather be right now than here teaching.”

Heart-Warming Generosity

Malawi is known as “The Warm Heart of Africa,” partly because the country has not been in as many conflicts as its neighbors, but Orlando said the Malawi people demonstrate this sentiment in their everyday interactions. She said she is constantly surprised by their generosity.

“They don’t have much, but they always want to share with me,” she said. “Even on the Matolla (flat-bed truck) rides into town, they want to make sure that I have the best seat, be it on a sack of shoes or a crate of empty Coke bottles.”

TATTERED CLOTHES AND FABRIC

Tattered clothes and fabric
They reflect what life bestows.
Tatters from the daily struggle
Weathered from the trying storm.

Tattered clothes and fabric
They work the fields of maize and homes.
The tatters that make a living
Keep the family close and warm.

Tattered clothes and fabric
They surround these hearts of gold.
In each tatter is a smile
And a hand to lend the poor.

Tattered clothes and fabric
They sing rejoice for what they know.
If you try to count these tatters
You’ll find more than hardship’s sores.

— Jessica Orlando ’07

Orlando is one of several UT students who chose to go into the Peace Corps. Seven alumni from UT are working through the process, while seven are serving now. Orlando’s classmate, Adrienne McGill ’07, teaches biology in Mozambique, and she said she has learned a lot about the politics and history of the southern African region.

“I hope when I come back to the states after my two years here, I will be able to impart and share some of this knowledge and growth with friends and family and my community,” she said. “I hope that they will be as curious and willing to listen as many Mozambicans in my community here are.”

When Orlando and McGill return, they will join the ranks of the 20 UT alumni who are returned Peace Corps volunteers, said Peace Corps recruiter Jean Kearn.

Kearn visited campus in February and said she received an overwhelming response. Forty students came to a presentation following a career fair, and the recruiter spoke to a dozen classes. Students from all majors apply to the Peace Corps, Kearn said, and their success rate is about one in three.

“Serving as a Peace Corps Volunteer means 27 months of change agent work in a third world arena,” Kearn said. “It takes determination, flexibility, patience, and a sense of humor. Applying to become a volunteer takes some time, preparation, and effort, but if you see the application process through, the rewards far outweigh the difficulties.”

Spartans Span the Globe

According to recruiters, UT alumni are volunteering in seven countries:

1. Panama
2. Malawi
3. Mozambique
4. Gambia
5. Moldova
6. Nicaragua
7. Belize

In these areas:

▲ business advising
▲ teaching science
▲ teaching elementary school
▲ community development
▲ youth development

“Extra! Extra! The Minaret Turns 75”

Each week, a group of University of Tampa students engage in an endeavor that’s almost as old as the University itself. They work into the early morning hours, mindful of the journalist’s sworn enemy — the deadline.

For 75 years students just like them have fought this common foe, ever since The Minaret was founded in 1933 — two years after the University’s founding. While in the 1930s they worked with typewriters, pad and pen, today they use wireless laptops and digital voice recorders.

The Early Edition

The first issue of The Minaret was published on Sept. 14, 1933 — replacing earlier incarnations as The Tampa Junior College Bulletin and The University of Tampa Bulletin.

University President Frederic Spaulding wrote in a brief article on the front of the eight-page first issue that The Minaret would play an important role in determining the future of the University.

“The college and The Minaret must work out their destiny together,” Spaulding wrote. “And success or failure for one means success or failure for the other.”

One of the earliest editors, Leah Hackney ’38, remembers working at the paper well, having served as editor in 1937-38.

She recalls working with William Culbreath, the paper’s first faculty advisor, as well as Morris Hale, the first dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. She remembers staying late into the night to prepare the paper before it was printed at the offices of the Tampa Morning Tribune.

“Working with the other students, even when they did not have time to get in copy, and also being the one to discuss everything with Dean Morris Hale, always a positive encounter, was a true learning experience for my later years as a teacher of English,” Hackney said.

Hackney also met her husband, James Hackney ’38, at UT. He became her successor at the paper.

The Minaret has been a steppingstone in the careers of countless writers, journalists and artists. The early 1950s saw the intricate, professional-quality comics of Tony Couch ’51 as a regular feature. Couch later went on to work as an artist for the Associated Press before developing a successful career as a freelance artist and author of art textbooks.

Two of UT’s most well known professional writers, Amy Hill Hearth ’82 and Connie May Fowler ’82, also came from the paper’s ranks.

Hearth, who recently co-authored a book with U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, served as the paper’s editor-in-chief during her senior year, an experience she says equipped her with the skills that launched her writing career.

“Working at The Minaret was the first time I discovered how much I loved being a writer and reporter,” Hearth said.

Getting the Scoop

The paper’s later years were marked by an increased emphasis on hard-hitting news and an independent editorial voice that did not shy away from controversy. Dr. Andy Solomon, who served as the paper’s faculty advisor from 1976 to 2006, counted this as one of the biggest improvements during his time as advisor.

Solomon drafted the Student Publications Governing Document, which was approved by the Board of Trustees in 1984, codifying freedom of the press for all UT publications and giving students an unrestricted voice.

For Jen Miller, who served as editor from 2000 to 2002, The Minaret opened the door for what proved to be a rewarding and unexpected career. Following her 2002 graduation, Miller established herself as a successful freelance writer, composing articles for publications such as the Philadelphia Inquirer and, most recently, publishing a travel guide for New Jersey’s south shore.

“The bare bones I needed to launch my writing career were learned at the paper,” said Miller, who came to UT to study marine biology. “You couldn’t get that experience in the classroom. Not only did I learn the basics, but Dr. Solomon put the responsibility for the paper largely in my hands. It was an amazing opportunity to learn leadership.”

Breaking News

Today, The Minaret is still a ubiquitous presence on the UT campus. Copies are free — a 100 percent drop in price from the 5-cent fee that was charged in the paper’s earliest days.

However, the bulk of The Minaret’s modern readership gets the latest news online at www.theminaretonline.com. The campus community is made instantly aware of breaking news events via Minaret e-mail alerts that are sent out to the site’s registered users.

Charles McKenzie, the paper’s faculty advisor since 2006, said that in the future The Minaret will “continue to emerge through new technology and sound journalistic principles as a site for campus news and discussion.”

“In more ways than people realize, The Minaret’s goals are parallel to the University’s,” McKenzie said. “For proof, one need only point to the success of our alumni, many of whom remain active in The Minaret family. Some have gone on to journalism careers, others to grad school. Some never work another day in journalism, but they report being well served by the experience.”

Reference Librarian Art Bagley, of UT’s Macdonald-Kelce Library, contributed to the research for this story.

Tony Couch ’51 was a budding star at the paper who later went on to work for the AP.
Improving Performance of Kids with ADHD

Parents of children with Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder often tell stories of children who cannot remember multiplication tables, but can recall exactly what a favorite uncle wore to their fourth birthday party.

Intrigued by these anecdotes, Dr. Jeff Skowronek, assistant professor of psychology, set out to determine if young people with ADHD had a better memory for episodic events than children without ADHD.

So Skowronek set up an experiment where 29 boys, in grades 4 through 8, completed two tasks to test their working memory and three to test their long-term episodic memory. Twelve of the students had ADHD, while 17 did not.

Skowronek had the students play a short-term memory game, like Simon, and had them tell him about the first day of that school year. He also asked them to tell him about a memory of a special event they recently experienced.

The children with ADHD performed worse than their peers on all the working memory tests, but excelled on the long-term episodic tasks. Memories of the first day of the school year did not differ significantly between those with ADHD and those without in terms of length or number of details. Part of the diagnosis for ADHD is excessive talking, but both groups followed the same basic script for that specific day.

Had the findings been a function of just talking, then we would expect to see longer and more detailed recounts regardless of the situation. The first day of school, however, follows a particular “format.” Everyone tries to find their classroom, see who is in their classes, find their friends.

The recall of those with ADHD was much longer and more detailed, however, when recounting episodic events that may have had more of a personal impact, indicating that those with ADHD may take in information differently during those times.

“If we could put this understanding to better use in the classroom, then we may see improved academic performance for children with ADHD,” Skowronek said.

But it can’t just be about doing something, Skowronek said. It’s about trying to get each component related. Hands-on projects, plus specific components related to the subject the instructor is trying to teach, could help keep children with ADHD because all the “distracters” actually relate back to the to-be-learned information. So, even if they cannot pay attention to the central components of the project, the peripheral components will still help the child get back to the information they were learning.

Dr. Skowronek’s research was published in the February issue of Learning Disabilities Research & Practice.
Scientific discovery is sometimes three parts preparation and one part serendipity. That’s what Dr. Joseph Laurino, professor of chemistry, found when he discovered a polymer that could be used to remove toxic materials from drinking water, save lives of people exposed to chemical contaminants, and make paint stay on bridges and other metal structures longer, all because it rapidly binds to heavy metal.

Laurino was working on the synthesis of a polymer-based cell membrane when he stumbled upon a compound that bound quickly with metals like lead, nickel, cadmium, silver and aluminum. Since it did not dissolve easily, it made it difficult to determine the structure of the compound.

“Admittedly, at first I was really annoyed, but then I realized its potential,” Laurino said.

Many applications soon came to mind, so Laurino applied for a patent.

One use for the polymer — poly(2-octadecyl butanedioic acid) — could be to filter toxic metals out of water. Lead and other heavy metal ions are usually difficult to get out of water, but after stirring for only 15 minutes, the potentially harmful metal binds to the white powder. The polymer and its bound metal can then be easily filtered, producing clean water. Alternatively, the water could be purified by filtering it through a column containing the compound.

“Surprisingly, the polymer is very efficient in that it binds about 300 times its weight in heavy metals,” Laurino went on to explain. “All of the existing chemical literature says this polymer shouldn’t work that way.”

His group is working with researchers at Marshall University on a project that will test the efficacy of the polymer in animals and humans. Many metals become toxic when ingested in food or water. If turned into a pharmaceutical, the compound could be used to bond with the metal in these patients and then pass through their digestive system safely.

Laurino also believes the polymer will bind with iron, so if it were added to paint, it might help reduce rust and corrosion. A bridge painter based in New England is testing the polymer to see if it will chemically bind the paint to the metal.

The first round of tests, with lead, led to a publication in the Journal of Macromolecular Science. Currently, Laurino and his team of students are further characterizing the polymer’s effectiveness with cadmium, nickel, aluminum and silver.

“It’s really exciting to work on something so groundbreaking,” said Zubair Ansari, who received the departmental fellowship to work on the project this summer. “It’s like you’re on the front lines of biomolecular research.”

decision makers and to get a response from the receiver to play back to the senders of the message,” said Kanaqlak Yup’ik, one of the Alaskan villagers Kennedy worked with.

Kennedy remembers the village sending its children to school in Oklahoma, where abuse and homesickness too often led to suicide. Those who returned often came home to a traditional way of life they were no longer equipped to live. One villager, William Trader, told Kennedy on film that he was afraid to send his daughter Martina away to a boarding school far from the village.

Another short film captured the children playing.

Those portions of the film were later screened for Harvard law school faculty. “Even these hardboiled lawyers from Harvard were crying,” Kennedy said.

They were so moved by the film, they assigned two Reginald fellows to work with Alaska Legal Services Corp. in a class action law suit against the state of Alaska.

As a result of the lawsuit, a bond issue was passed to build more than 200 high schools in Alaska. Based on the success of the process, Kennedy received a Fulbright to Fiji and spent a year teaching Peace Corps volunteers how to replicate his work in Alaska.

Kennedy’s book is available at online and retail booksellers.
Marfise Named REGIONAL AD OF THE YEAR

BY Thomas Kolbe, Sports Information Director & Robin Roger, Writer

A thletic Director Larry Marfise remembers watching a basketball player cross the stage at a recent UT commencement ceremony. The young man graduated in four years, when people didn’t think he would graduate at all. Marfise says he had tears in his eyes.

Marfise, who holds two master’s degrees and was a former English teacher, knows that to win on the athletic fields and courts, students have to excel in the classroom and graduate.

“Our goal at the University is for all of our athletes to graduate,” he says. “All glory is fleeting. Sooner or later it comes down to the education that the students receive.”

His philosophy seems to be working, in more ways than one. UT teams have won five national championships in his nine years here, and the school has continually placed among the top 30 nationally in the NCAA Division II U.S. Sports Academy Directors’ Cup standings.

Additionally, UT facility improvements include a new soccer and baseball stadium, a modernized weight room, renovated locker rooms and upgrades to the softball and tennis complexes. Marfise also established four new athletics endowments at UT.

Because of these accomplishments, Marfise was honored by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) with the Southeast Region AstroTurf AD of the Year award (A DOY).

“This is a tremendous honor from an outstanding organization that I am proud to be a part of,” Marfise says. “This would not have been possible without the outstanding coaches and staff that I work with on a daily basis.”

The coaching staff has tallied up an impressive number of awards and recognitions. Just last year, cross country coach Jarrett Slaven earned the Sunshine State Conference Men’s and Women’s Coach of the Year award and the South Region Coach of the Year award.

Richard Schmidt, in his 25th year as men’s basketball coach, earned SSC Coach of the Year honors six times and regional Coach of the Year in 2007, for the fourth time.

UT Boasts Two SSC Athletes of the Year

Two University of Tampa athletes earned 2008 Sunshine State Conference Athlete of the Year honors. Women’s soccer goalkeeper Shannon Aitken ’08 was named Female Athlete of the Year, while Men’s basketball standout Jeremy Black ’08 was named Male Athlete of the Year.

Voting for the award is conducted by the league’s sports information directors.

Aitken had a tremendous year for the Spartans, leading the team to its first ever NCAA Division II National Championship and earning Division II Women’s Soccer National Player of the Year honors. Black helped lead the Spartans to a second-place finish in the conference.
Women’s Soccer on the Tube
The UT women’s soccer team was featured on ESPN2 in July, as part of a feature on NCAA sports national champions from the 2007/2008 school year. The athletes were included because of their 2007 NCAA II national championship, a first for the program.

Ahead of the Pack
The men’s and women’s cross country teams earned the best GPAs in 2008 of all NCAA Division II teams. The women had a cumulative GPA of 3.67 while the men recorded a combined GPA of 3.42. Paige Williams ‘10 and Laura Woznicki ‘08 were named to the 2008 USTFCCCA Division II Women’s All-Academic Track and Field Team.

Cross Country Teams Hope for New Milestones
When Jarrett Slaven became head cross country coach at The University of Tampa in 1999, he took over a program that never reached an NCAA tournament nor won a Sunshine State Conference title.

The program has made great strides, and today the teams have a good shot at winning both the SSC Championships and the regional competition. Slaven is hoping for a top-five finish at nationals.

By 2002, the men’s and women’s teams had already placed sixth and fourth respectively in the NCAA South Regional. While the teams fell short of making it to the NCAA Finals, it was the beginning of a new trend for both teams.

Both teams have since appeared in each NCAA South Regional for six consecutive seasons. And, in 2003, the women began a streak of five straight NCAA Finals appearances.

While much of the credit may be directed to Slaven and assistant coach Dror Vaknin, a world-class runner who joined the team in 2000, the head coach is quick to give the praise to others.

Women Turn the Corner
Slaven is grateful for the success of Tracy Buxton ’02 and Dee Dee Haefling ’05. Along with Erin Wilson ’03, the group comprised UT’s first-ever first-team all-Sunshine State Conference selections in 2001. The year also marked a first as Buxton was named the SSC Female Runner of the Year.

Buxton began a string of five consecutive SSC Female Runners of the Year for the Spartans as Haefling earned the award in 2002, followed by Allison Macsas ’05 (2003-05) with the program’s first three-time winner.

“Tracy (Buxton) was our first elite runner and that really pushed the others to new levels as well,” says Slaven. “She and Dee Dee (Haefling) were the first to go to the NCAAs and their success was instrumental in the program turning the corner.”

Macsas became the first UT All-American in 2003 and again in 2004 with eighth place finishes in the national championships both years.

“Each athlete made an imprint on the other athletes’ minds,” says Slaven. “Dee Dee noticed how hard Tracy worked and followed her footsteps. They realized that this type of success took a lot of work and were more than willing to accept the sacrifice for the benefit of the program.”

Following the departure of Macsas, Laura Woznicki ‘08 quickly emerged, becoming a two-time first-team all-SSC selection and capping off her career as a 2007 All-American. To this day, Woznicki and Macsas remain the lone Spartans to earn All-American honors.

Though Woznicki has graduated, Slaven returns all-South region runners Alysha Duffy ’10, Jessica Forrister ’10 and Paige Williams ’10. Now that the team has reached its goal of finishing in the top 10, Slaven says he is pushing the women to go for the top five.

“I Am Going to Nationals”
Elias Gonzalez ’04 set the ball rolling for the future of the men’s squad, though he only ran for UT for two years. He was named SSC Male Runner of the Year in both 2002 and 2003 and All-American in 2003.

“Elias opened the door for the men,” says Slaven. “At the initial meeting, I asked all runners to introduce themselves. Elias was a junior and said ‘Hello, I am Elias Gonzalez, and I am going to nationals.’ I will never forget those words, and it was people like that who set the standards for the others.”

Current Spartan strength coach Eric Hall ’05 became the first Spartan male runner to earn first-team all-SSC honors in 2001 as he teamed with Gonzales and Dirk Bockel ‘04 (see sidebar) to lead the 2002 and 2003 squads to top 10 regional showings.

David Forry ’08 then arrived in 2004 to become Tampa’s first four-time all-SSC selection. A three-time member of the first-team, Forry recently teamed with fellow first-teamers Chris Catanach ‘10 and Tony Nicolosi ‘10 to guide the Spartans to the program’s first NCAA Finals appearance in 2007.

1986. Swim coach Ed Brennan has coached more than 100 All-Americans and was named National Coach of the Year in 1986 when the team went to the NCAA II championships ranked 10th and finished second.

It’s nice to work with such dedicated coaches, Marfise says. At other Division II schools, some coaches are preoccupied with jumping to Division I, but at UT, he says, the coaches focus on graduating students. The graduation rate for athletes last year was 96 percent, but Marfise says he won’t be happy until it’s 100 percent.

Marfise received the award for regional AD of the Year along with 28 other recipients during the James J. Corbett awards luncheon at NaCDa’s 43rd annual Convention in Dallas, TX.

NaCDa Executive Director Mike Cleary says, “These 29 winners exemplify that, providing us with a group of outstanding athletics directors who excel at their jobs.”

Marfise, a Chicago native, attended DePauw University, where he lettered in three sports and was an all-conference football player. Prior to joining the Spartans in 1999, he served as athletics director at Ferris State University (Mich.) from 1994 to 1999 and associate athletics director at St. Mary’s College of California from 1985 to 1994.

Marfise is proud of winning the award, but he doesn’t want to take credit for what others have done — bringing in good kids and making sure they graduate.

UT Hosts Championships

In 2008, the Spartans have the opportunity to showcase their elite runners as they host a pair of events. The first was the UT Early Bird Classic on Sept. 5, and the regular season will conclude with the SSC Championships at home on Oct. 25.

“We are extremely excited about these races and ecstatic about the SSC race,” says Slaven. “This is the second time we have hosted and we have a lovely, spectator friendly park.”

The following schedules are for home games only. For more information, call the Athletic Office at (813) 253-6240. UT faculty, staff and students free with ID. Admission to tennis is free. Spartan to Olympian

Dirk Bockel ’04 competed in the men’s triathlon final at the 2008 summer Olympics in Beijing, China, coming in 29th out of 50 with a time of 1:51:31. The former Spartan swimmer and cross country runner competed for his home country of Luxembourg.

“I’m extremely happy,” Bockel said following the race. “It feels nearly like winning a medal.”

At UT, Bockel was a first-team all-Sunshine State Conference runner in 2002 and 2003. He also became the first UT male to earn all-South Region honors in 2002.

The sole athlete from Luxembourg in the men’s triathlon, Bockel has competed in numerous races throughout the world in recent years in order to qualify for the Olympics.

“The University of Tampa is where it all started,” Bockel said. “I’m still racing, and I still have a lot of goals.” He added that he hopes to relocate to Tampa after competing in more races.

Alumni Take a Trip Back in Time

I always felt I had a pretty good grasp on U.S. history, but I would be lying if I told you I knew Harpers Ferry was in West Virginia. After a recent tour hosted by the Washington, D.C., area alumni chapter, I not only know the exact geographical location of Harpers Ferry, but I can also tell you a great deal more. I can tell you the year of John Brown’s Raid (1859), the names of the two rivers that join together there (the Shenandoah and the Potomac) and how many stairs you have to climb to get to Jefferson’s Rock (too many to count).

Professor James Beckman ‘90 graciously offered his services and expertise this spring by leading our group on a tour of his home away from home, Harpers Ferry. A recipient of a UT National Alumni Association faculty research grant in 2003, Beckman is an expert on Harpers Ferry. After falling in love with the history and beauty of the town, he and his wife moved there in 1997. He has lectured and published articles on Harpers Ferry for many years, most recently publishing a book on the town in 2006.

The tour started in the Lower Town at John Brown’s fort, which we learned is a few feet away from its original location and actually, if I remember correctly, the fifth location for the fort. We then worked our way over the river confluence and back, through the historic town, up the hill to Jefferson’s Rock, across the cemetery and past Storer College. Beckman’s antebellum home served as the final stop as it contained many museum quality pieces that he has collected over the years.

After the tour Beckman quizzed the group — all professors love pop quizzes — to see how much history truly soaked in, and prizes were given to those who answered questions correctly.

Current UT parent Connie Latimer said, “Professor Beckman’s detailed knowledge of his subject and his engaging speaking style made Harper’s Ferry history come alive for me. I especially enjoyed the opportunity to tour Professor Beckman’s home and to listen to his ghost stories.”

One of the main reasons we have alumni chapters and hold events for alumni and parents is to keep our extended UT family connected to the University and to keep the UT spirit alive in our graduates. This tour is an excellent example of one of our chapters achieving that goal. I would like to personally thank Professor Beckman for leading us on an exciting and educational tour and for hosting us in his historic home. It was a wonderful afternoon that was clearly enjoyed by all in attendance.

Preston Coleman ‘07 said he enjoyed having Beckman in class and seeing his history lectures come alive.

“The event was great. I was always a big fan of Professor Beckman during school, and I am glad that I got a chance to see everything he always spoke about in class.”

Since December 2005, Guidara has been the commander of the Tampa Police Department’s District 3, which includes the heavily populated and fast-growing areas of east Tampa, Ybor City, Channelside and downtown Tampa.

Since 2005, District 3 saw a 25.5 percent reduction in serious offenses, such as murder, sexual assault and robbery. These crimes decreased another 17.2 percent from January to the end of May 2008.

In 2003, Tampa Mayor Pam Iorio selected Guidara to serve as the interim public information officer for the police department. This was after Guidara successfully launched “Operation Commitment,” a program aimed at reducing crime in an effort to further the mayor’s goal of revitalizing east Tampa.

BASCOM BRADSHAW ’97 and his wife, Tracy, are working hard to find homes for dogs and cats they’ll probably never meet.

They recently published a children’s book Where Do Dingoes Come From? to educate children and adults about the importance of pet adoption and proper pet care. Miles away from home themselves, the couple lives in Doha, Qatar, where Bradshaw is director of health services for a U.S. military base. They have 11 cats and one dog, the inspiration for Dingo.

Tracy adopted the dog after the family who was supposed to adopt him did not show and he was scheduled to be put down. She volunteers at shelters wherever they move, including Galveston, TX, and Okinawa, Japan, and works with local communities to sponsor trap-spay-neuter programs for feral cat colonies.

“We believe that Dingo the dog will provide a unique approach to reaching children, and more importantly their parents, through picture books,” Bradshaw says.

The story begins with Cricket, a young adopted girl, asking her mom about how she adopted Dingo. Her mom tells Cricket how she fell in love with Dingo while volunteering at a local shelter. Bradshaw and his wife plan to adopt a child from China, and they hope to instill their love of pets in her.

A doctor of osteopathic medicine, Bradshaw began sketching Dingo after he came back from a deployment in Iraq. He and his wife put the book together in their free time, which wasn’t easy, given six day weeks on the base. The illustrations were done by a former Disney animator.

The book will cost $12, and a percentage of all proceeds from the book will be donated to support organizations that promote pet adoption from shelters and pet rescue. It is available at the Barnes & Noble Web site and most other online book sellers.

Now that the book is complete, the couple is developing a curriculum for fourth grade students to teach them responsible pet care.

“If you teach children to take care of pets, they’ll know how to treat other people as well,” Bradshaw says.

Sporting a Unique Career

Watching sports on TV at work won’t get ADAM JONES ’04 in trouble.

That’s because, as a senior consultant in PricewaterhouseCoopers’ Sports Advisory Practice, watching and studying sports is his work.

“The simplest way to put it is — I advise sports teams’ owners as they’re looking to build new facilities on how much money they’re going to make from their investment in that facility,” Jones said.

An ownership group vying for a new Major League Soccer team recently used his expertise and won. The as-of-yet unnamed team kicks off its inaugural season in 2010.

Jones also advises cities and states on financial matters associated with bringing in a professional team, and colleges nationwide study his advice before adding seats to a stadium.

“To be able to combine my passion for sports with my aptitude for business, financial and economics and realize that there really is this unique industry out there — it’s been great,” he said.

Jones’ hunger for sports met his thirst for success at UT where he majored in marketing and sport management and minored in finance. He’s since followed those up with a master’s degree from the University of Florida.

Prior to his career at PwC, Jones worked with the Tampa Bay Rays and Tampa Bay Lightning while going to school. He credits UT’s structure and location in downtown Tampa with his opportunity to intern at PwC, which ultimately led to a full-time job.

“There are not many universities that are in the position that UT is in to give me that type of opportunity,” he said. “I was very blessed to have the opportunity in the sport management program. Dr. [Robert] Birrenkott is the one who gave me the introduction to PricewaterhouseCoopers, so I owe a lot to him for where I’ve gotten to today.”

Jones’ work has even earned the 26-year-old a spot in Consulting Magazine’s “Top 30 under 30” issue.

While he’s far ahead of the competition in his field, he hasn’t forgotten where he came from. Jones says he tries to bring recent UT grads on board at PwC to follow in his footsteps.

“I love working in sports, and I owe it all to the foundation I got at UT,” he said.

So does his brother, Josh Jones ’08, who graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in sport management and now works with the Tampa Bay Sports Commission.

The brothers try to enjoy a few sporting events together but, “I do think I walk into a stadium and put my business cap on the second I get in there,” he said. LLL

Mercedes Leon ’95 says it was “divine intervention” that brought her to The University of Tampa. Having overcome a physical disability, poverty and numerous other hardships, her faith is easy to understand.

As she campaigns for the office of state attorney for Florida’s Ninth Circuit, she says that same divinity will win her the election in November.

“I feel that God has put me in this situation,” Leon said. “I feel that I will win. My heart, my soul is in it.”

A Long Road

Leon has traveled a long road toward the election for state attorney — one marked with many potholes.

A Cuba native, she was at a disadvantage from birth, having been born with neurofibromatosis — a genetic disorder that resulted in deformities in her feet.
She lived the first nine years of her life in a wheelchair while artificial tendons and pins were placed in her feet to correct the condition.

As a teenager, Leon immigrated to the U.S., along with her mother, her brother and 31 other refugees via a small boat. Her family settled in central Florida, where she and her mother obtained minimum wage jobs.

Leon later got a job as a waitress at Disney World and began to teach herself English by reading children’s books and watching TV. She married, gave birth to a son, endured other surgeries and eventually obtained U.S. citizenship.

Even as her newfound success began to blossom, Leon felt there was still something missing.

“It dawned on me that I couldn’t be a waitress the rest of my life,” she said. “I had forgotten why I came to this country. I said to myself, I can reach age 35 as a waitress or I can reach age 35 as an attorney. The only way to get ahead was to get an education.”

Leon completed an associate’s degree at Valencia Community College and then had to choose between UT or the University of Central Florida to pursue her bachelor’s degree. She chose UT.

“My best years were at The University of Tampa,” she said. “It was such a rewarding experience. The professors were so invested in the individual success of their students.”

Worth the Commute

Commuting daily from Orlando, Leon became active on campus as she sought a double major in criminology and political science. She founded the Organization for Future Lawyers, was elected Student Government vice president and served as the first student coordinator of PEaCE (People Exploring Active Community Experiences), UT’s student volunteer organization. She did all of this while continuing to work and raise her then-12-year-old son.

“She was a hard worker and very dedicated to helping people on campus and in the community,” said Bob Ruday, UT’s dean of students. “She really triumphed over great adversities.”

A 1995 issue of Florida Leader magazine named Leon, then known by her married name, Mercedes López, as one of 16 students to receive an honorable mention for the magazine’s award for Florida College Student of the Year.

She went on to earn a law degree from Stetson University College of Law in 1998 and worked as an assistant public defender before going into private practice as a criminal defense attorney.

“I was called ‘The People’s Lawyer,’” she said.

She currently heads her own firm, the Leon Law Center, based in Kissimmee, FL.

A New Journey

In February, Leon filed paperwork with the Florida Division of Elections to run for state attorney. A Republican, Leon’s Democratic opponent is the incumbent State Attorney, who has run unopposed in every election since 1988.

“I want to restore community confidence and trust in the integrity of the State Attorney’s Office,” she said. “We need to partner with law enforcement and the community to raise awareness of the consequences of breaking the law. Right now, central Florida has the highest crime in the state. We need to do damage control and work with everybody to take a proactive approach.”

Dr. Richard Piper, who knew Leon through her involvement in the Honors Program at UT, said Leon’s success as an attorney is not surprising.

“She was always full of enthusiasm and passionate about the study of the law,” Piper said. “I am confident that she will be an excellent state attorney.”

Leon says she is confident that she will win the election. Nevertheless, she will let her faith guide her, as always.

“At the end it will be God’s will,” she said.

“I said to myself, I can reach age 35 as a waitress or I can reach age 35 as an attorney. The only way to get ahead was to get an education.”

Dear Editor,

In your recent obituary for Mary Ann (Sampey) Yorkunas (Spring 2008), you referred to her having an unknown donor. I thought you might like to know the source’s name and origin, especially since the same source was able to help at least 10 deserving, high-achieving students.

The source was an association begun by my grandfather, Judge William Hunter, city attorney from 1896 to 1904, and chairman of the Hillsborough County Juvenile Board and its board of visitors, which oversaw the detention home meant to keep young offenders out of jail.

Disturbed by what he saw as a contributing factor — truancy from school — Judge learned from the boys that a main cause was lack of shoes, clothes, books and other school supplies. Judge established the association to provide monetary help for these youth to help them stay in school.

At Judge’s death in 1935, my father, William Finlay Hunter, continued the work. With Dean Hale and then President Spalding, a system was set up for identifying several applicants who had excellent academic records but little chance at the few scholarships available that Depression year.

My connection with Mary Ann is the lovely irony of this piece. We met at Tampa U when we were both cheerleaders. We became fast friends, and the ensuing sisterly connection has lasted. She and Al were my daughter’s godparents.

As to why I never told her my father selected her and gave the money for her education: I did not know until long after we had left college. When I asked should I tell her, my wryly Irish father said only, “Would it make a difference now?” But now I can tell her son Pete that she may not have known but that the connection created by that gift has been life-enriching for both Mary Ann and me.

And the Award Goes To…

As a film student in 1983, Visiting Assistant Professor of Communication Tom Garrett attended the Cannes Film Festival for the first time. And, he said in retrospect, “It changed my life.”

It also likely changed the lives of the eight recent UT alumni who traveled with Garrett to the 61st annual Cannes Film Festival this May. The group got an insider’s view of the festival, from attending premieres to watching the business of film unfold at the Marché du Film (Film Market).

One alumnus, Christian Perkins ’08, shopped around a trailer he filmed on campus to obtain the financing to make a feature length film about Hollywood star Montgomery Clift.

With 25 years of experience in all areas of movie making — producing, directing, marketing and distributing — Garrett has the connections and the experience to give students a first-hand look at the good, the bad and the ugly of movie-making. He hopes to make the trip with students annually, and make it a part of the UT film major curriculum.

“This will introduce them to what we really do as film producers and makers,” Garrett said.

While the UT Spartans caught more water than air, they still put on a good show at the Red Bull Flugtag in Tampa on July 19. The team, made up of current students and alumni, built their own flying Minaret, and dressed as Spartans for the occasion. Though the craft plummeted directly into the water, the team performed in front of a record crowd of about 100,000. Members of the UT Spartans were (back from left) J.J. Paolino '09, Kyle Wright '08, Cory Stahl '08, Fahad Alhasan '08 and (front) Ryan Shaffer '08.

Joe Wessel '95, Jay McAndrews '81 and Charles Gafkowski '81 shared their UT stories and Tampa pride as Charles displayed his fraternity letters on a Retreat t-shirt.

Over the two-and-a-half years it took Cammick to graduate with his B.A. degree, he estimates that he gave hundreds of tours of the school, describing some features of UT that no longer exist. “I learned how all the elements of the operation came together to recruit, close, and retain students. I also was able to travel with Bob and do the firsthand ‘selling’ of UT to prospective students. Today that is my most valuable business skill,” said Cammick.

Cammick would eventually use those business skills, coupled with an MBA degree from UT, to establish his own company, Myriad Network Service. The company proved to be so successful that it was bought three years later by a venture capital company. Several years later, when Myriad was spun off, Cammick was able to gather investors to take control of the company and rebrand it Network Dynamics Inc. He continues to work there to this day, as a senior vice president and board member.

Keeping Connected

Cammick continues to provide wireless networking services to UT. He not only wired the pool and other buildings on campus, but he most recently...

wired the President’s Board Room on the ninth floor of the Vaughn Center.

When his friend and mentor Bob Cook met with an untimely and accidental death while on a recruiting trip for UT in 1997, Peter again sprung into action, establishing an endowed scholarship in memory of the person he credits with much of his success. Cammick not only raised the seed money to start the memorial scholarship for Cook, but also committed to the perpetuity of the fund by naming UT as a beneficiary of his life insurance policy.

“Bob was more than just an admissions counselor — he was a friend,” Cammick said. “After graduation he visited with me whenever he was recruiting near where I lived. In fact, my daughter, who also went to UT, called him Uncle Bob when she was little. This level of commitment was not just for me. Whenever you saw Bob he was feeding, helping or in some way mentoring a student. He really cared for UT students at a level you rarely see.”

Appreciating Value

Cammick is a regular face on campus, and considers his gifts of money and time as a way to help continue the trend of improvement he has seen on campus.

Cammick said, “I support UT because your education is an investment. As an undergraduate, I made a big investment in my degree, and just as if I made an investment in a rental building, I wouldn’t let it go to ruin because then my investment would be worthless. What I would do is fix it up, make it worth more. That is why I support The University of Tampa. And it is good to see my degree worth more and more every year.”

Is Your Will Safe?

Nearly 60 percent of Americans lack a basic will. If you are among the 40 percent who do have a will, it is important to keep it in a safe place, but never in a safe deposit box. Though the laws vary by state, safe deposit boxes are frequently locked upon the death of the box owner. Some states require a court order or other legal action to remove a will, which can be costly.

Your attorney should keep a copy of your will, and it might also be beneficial to keep a sealed copy with your executor or family members. A will is useless if it cannot be located after you are gone.

As you consider your estate planning, the Planned Giving Office at The University of Tampa is here to help. You may request a free brochure, “Planning Your Will and Protecting Your Decisions” by calling the office at (813) 253-6220, or by e-mailing us at plannedgiving@ut.edu.

Sue Tennant was born and raised in Tampa, attending high school at Hillsborough. It made sense for her to continue her education at The University of Tampa. When Ackert first matriculated at UT in 1964, she was a young woman of slight build, so slight that she had difficulty opening the doors to Plant Hall. Ackert likes to tell the story of how she would pace her approach to the door so that a fellow Spartan could do the heavy lifting for her.

After graduating from UT, she entered the banking business and started a career that would reach its pinnacle in her role as the vice president of First Union (now Wachovia). Ackert gives a lot of credit to UT for the strength of her career. Though she was too slight to open the heavy doors to Plant Hall, she says without hesitation that UT opened many doors for her.

WHERE DID YOU STAY ON CAMPUS?

I was in Howell Hall from my sophomore year until I graduated. It was sometimes, unfortunately, referred to as the “Hog Locker!” It was a very old hotel on campus and since has been replaced with much grander student housing.

Howell Hall was well-built and, while I was there, well-maintained. I do recall the thermostat being a running battle between dorm mothers and residents. It is amazing what a cup of ice will do under one of those in the winter time.

FAVORITE SPOT ON CAMPUS?

The lobby in Plant Hall. It was a great place to wait for the next class and see everyone coming and going through the building. The round seats facing the west doors were coveted because you could see the entire lobby from there. I probably should have said the library, but then that would not be totally truthful.

MOST MEMORABLE PROFESSOR OR ADMINISTRATOR?

I fondly remember the president who was in leadership while I was attending, Dr. Delo, as well as my history professor, Dr. Covington, my sociology professor, Dr. Haney, and my religion professor, Rabbi Zielonka. So many of them impacted my life with their knowledge and love for their areas of expertise.

HOW DID UT PREPARE YOU?

Because I was extremely shy, the professors pushed me to overcome my self-consciousness and not give up until I had the information mastered. I reached a level in management I never dreamed of, and I am sure it was because my education from UT taught me how to learn and meet the demands of my professors.

WHY DID YOU CHOOSE TO INCLUDE UT IN YOUR ESTATE PLANS?

I was so blessed to have parents that paid for my education. I remember one student, in particular, who did sewing and alterations to help pay for her education while she was attending. The gift of my education from my parents instilled in me a desire to help others who don’t have that same opportunity and who are working their way through school.
The University of Tampa has many wonderful supporters and volunteers that generously give their time, talent, and treasure year after year. Often, people think you need to be an alumnus or a parent to be involved, but that is certainly not the case.

Take Joe House, for instance. House became interested in The University of Tampa when his employer, USAA, was approached for support. The more Joe learned, the more he wanted to get involved. In 1990 he joined the Board of Trustees and chaired the board from 1993-1995.

It was through Joe that his wife, Sue, got involved. “When I learned about UT, I knew I wanted to help,” she says. “It is such an asset to have this impressive university right in the heart of Tampa.”

Sue found her niche with the Board of Fellows in 2003, and has served as the membership co-chair and development co-chair. The Fellows, established in 1973, is a group of 125 business leaders dedicated to strengthening ties between the business community and the University. The Fellows host events and fundraisers throughout the school year to increase UT’s visibility.

Each Fellows member gives a minimum gift of $1,000, or a $1,500 named scholarship, which totals more than $100,000 each year toward the Annual Fund. They also contribute approximately $35,000 annually from event proceeds to the Fellows Endowed Scholarship to the John H. Sykes College of Business.

“I think the Board of Fellows is one of the best groups in town to network and meet wonderful and kind business people,” Sue says. “I always enjoy attending the Business Network Symposia. It is great to see friends, meet new people, and of course, hear excellent speakers.”

The Board of Fellows host three BUSINESS NETWORK SYMPOSIA each year, with each featuring three Tampa Bay business leaders discussing issues of local economic importance. Recent speakers include CEOs from Wikipedia, the 2009 Super Bowl Host Committee, Odyssey Marine Exploration and PODS. UT’s Chair of the Board of Trustees, Maureen Rorech Dunkel, spoke at one, as did UT alum and vice president of marketing for Bonefish Grill, Richard Turer.

The Houses’ son, Mark, chose to join the Board of Fellows and is an integral volunteer at UT. The managing director of The Beck Group, Mark has been an active member of the Board of Fellows for years. And just like his dad, Mark is also involved with UT through his employer.

This year Mark will serve as co-chair of the Fellows Forum for 2008-09. The FELLOWS FORUM features nationally recognized business leaders. It draws close to 1,000 professionals and students, and proceeds from the forum fund the Fellows’ endowed scholarship. The CEO speakers from this year’s event were from Airtran Airways, Raymond James Financial and The Beck Group.

Until recently, the House family has only been tied to UT by their desire to grow a university in the heart of Tampa. After nearly two decades, however, they have a new association. Their grandson, Pat House, graduated from UT in May. He played for two UT national championship baseball teams and hopes to continue his connection to his alma mater.

“It’s been a family affair for us,” reflects Sue. “It is the exciting campus growth and many positive improvements that President Vaughn has made that keep us all enthusiastic and supportive year after year.”

(From left to right) Pat ’08, Sue, Joe, and Mark House have helped change the face of UT. Here they stand in front of the University’s newest residence hall, Stadium Center, which Mark’s employer, The Beck Group, constructed along with David A. Straz Jr. Hall, the Vaughn Center and Brevard Hall.
PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE NOW

AN ANNUAL MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT RONALD L. VAUGHN
Last year was extraordinary as UT was buffeted by various challenges. We responded to a rapidly declining economy, to legislative attacks on the Florida Resident Access Grant and to many competitive, individual and personal challenges.

Competition in higher education continues to accelerate at a time when college enrollment growth has slowed nationwide and the economy has weakened.

But UT continues to thrive. This year we celebrated another record enrollment, bringing together a community representing 50 states and 100 countries. We started new programs and made numerous improvements to services, technology, facilities and other areas.

Most of all, our students and our graduates are excelling. For example, 10 students presented papers at national, regional, and state conferences, and our students competed at the Regional American Collegiate Moot Court Association. This year’s group of 1,400 graduates reported a 94.2 percent success rate in their postgraduate plans, with a quarter of those planning to continue their educations in graduate school.

Because of the UT educational experience, our graduates truly can — and do — go anywhere.

*Quoted from the new UT promotional video at www.ut.edu.
There is new vigor in the academic ranks, and further commitment to strengthening UT’s academic focus.”

— President Ronald L. Vaughn
An exciting new development was the President’s Leadership Fellows program, which starts this fall. Each year 25 first-year students will be selected through a competitive process, and they will refine and expand their capacity to lead in a global society through participation in the four-year program. Those selected earn an annual $1,000 scholarship.

Organizations provide a natural foundation for leader development. Counting all student clubs, teams and organizations, UT boasts 140 different opportunities for involvement and individual development. Twenty-three new student organizations registered this past year, including the Astronomy Club, Recycle UT, Forensic League Debate Society, Indian Cultural Association, Pre-law Society, UT Public Relations Association and Women’s Club Lacrosse.

Students also enjoyed on-campus events. Those with the largest attendance this year included a concert in Plant Park, Greek Sing, Campus MovieFest and the Haunted House. There were more than 5,000 different programs offered in the residence halls.

The 2007-08 academic year marked expansion of the intramural sports program, with more than 2,700 students participating in more than 800 games. Club sports were active as well, and the fledgling Roller Hockey Sport club earned an invitation to compete in the collegiate national championships.

Continued Excellence on the Playing Fields

Student athletes collectively posted a stellar performance this year, not only on the playing fields but also in the classroom. Their average GPA was 3.10, and the swimming and both the men’s and women’s cross-country teams had the highest team GPA in the country.

UT’S FUTURE

Our vision calls for UT becoming a model 21st-century metropolitan university. Key elements of that vision a decade from now include:

▲ A distinction for academic excellence
▲ Committed faculty and staff
▲ A medium-sized independent institution of approximately 6,500 students
▲ A curriculum to prepare students for contributions into the 21st century
▲ Co-curricular programs that enable students to develop socially and culturally and build their values
▲ Support services and technology necessary to match the full range of teaching and learning styles

▲ Students who are fully engaged with academic programs, and the surrounding community
▲ Enhanced global cultural understanding with programs and activities
▲ A vibrant campus atmosphere and learning environment
▲ An institutional sensitivity to meeting the changing needs and expectations of students
▲ Focusing on continuous institutional evaluation and improvement
▲ A University that is well-connected to the community
▲ A sound financial structure derived from a larger endowment, prudent financial planning, and vigorous efforts to acquire the breadth of resources necessary.
Students can grab a snack and do their homework on the first floor of Stadium Center, which is networked for wireless Internet and includes a cafe serving coffee drinks and pastries.

ENHANCING THE EXPERIENCE

- Today the campus has 22 different food venues.
- Providing for the safety and well-being of all of the UT community continued to be a high priority in 2007-2008. Our campus security staff was expanded to 31, who serve campus 24/7.
- UT completed a new energy audit and continued with aggressive efforts to improve economic and environmental impacts.

Strengthening the Learning Environment

Part of the strategy for building the foundation for the future and for successfully engaging students today is to create the very best educational environment.

For the 13th year in a row, UT ended the year in the black, which is a testament to the fiscal responsibility of all areas on campus. UT now has a budget of $135 million, and almost 1,100 employees who are all strongly committed to our educational mission.

UT Recognition

1. Creative Colleges: A Guide for Student Actors, Artists, Dancers, Musicians, and Writers (2008) — UT is one of seven universities in the Southeast that is lauded for its creative writing program.

2. Princeton Review “Best 290 Business Schools (2008) — UT’s John H. Sykes College of Business was named an outstanding business school — and one of the 290 best business schools in the world. UT students are quoted as saying that “teamwork and leadership skills” are “the focus of this MBA program,” and that professors here “have a genuine interest in students’ success and academic endeavors.” Students also praise the “beautiful campus” with “state-of-the-art facilities.”

3. UT is listed as 46th of 100 colleges that are “better than you think” in Harvard Schmarvard (2003). A counselor is quoted as saying UT has an “unbelievable business building and a rapidly growing arts program.”

4. UT is named in The Best 201 Colleges for the Real World (2000). UT’s Evening College, MBA program for working professionals and “culture without going through customs” were named as being among its unique features.

5. UT is “hot and trendy,” according to the 2004 edition of The Unofficial, Biased Guide to the 328 Most Interesting Colleges. The “hot and trendy” list is based on responses from high school guidance counselors across the nation.

6. In 2007 UT was named to the President’s Service Honor Roll, sponsored by The Corporation for National and Community Service, for its work with Big Brothers and Big Sisters, its days of service and its alternative break programs.
The new Sykes Chapel and Center for Faith and Values (see page 1), is a critical piece in the educational environment as it will provide a central space for students to develop holistically. Administrative, academic and athletic spaces were upgraded as well, ranging from a renovation of the soccer field to moving Career Services to new offices in the Riverside Center. The next issue of the UT Journal will give you a glimpse of the amazing transformation of the Cass Science and Communication Building.

Our Bright Futures

We are poised and ready to make the next giant step into UT’s future. Already we’re setting another record in enrollment — 5,800 students this fall. It is clear that we must prepare for new challenges and remain focused on improvement efforts as we continue our commitment to providing an excellent educational experience for all UT students. I believe the best days of UT are ahead of us, and especially ahead of the students who will be able to go anywhere and do anything because of the experiences they had at UT.
Dear Friends of UT:

The lists below acknowledge the individuals, corporations and foundations donating to The University of Tampa during the 2007-08 fiscal year. Once again, the outpouring of support for your University was astounding.

The University was the beneficiary of gifts from many generous individuals, corporations and foundations from June 1, 2007, through May 31, 2008.

Through your gifts, you play a vital role in the life of the University. As always, I hope that each of you has an opportunity to visit the campus soon to see the projects made possible through your capital campaign contributions, and to meet the faculty and students whose work and study your Annual Fund gifts have helped sustain.

Sincerely,

Ronald L. Vaughn, Ph.D.
President

Dr. David Delo reads the Minaret at the James L. Ferman Sr. home on Bayshore Boulevard in 1963, where he and his wife lived and entertained. Some of the headlines in that issue relate to things of the past, such as Religious Emphasis Week, February graduations and the Spartan wrestling team, while “Golf, Tennis Are Now Under Way,” speaks of things to come. Maybe it’s time to simplify with a custom UT license plate. It doesn’t have as many numbers or letters to remember, and it looks better, too. It’s short, it’s sweet, it says a lot about who you are: You love UT, you like things that look cool on your car, you have trouble remembering your keys, let alone your plate number. (For an extra fee in addition to the $27 specialty plate fee, you can even make up your own.)

Remember: At just $27 in addition to the regular tag fee, a University of Tampa specialty plate is an affordable, handsome and lasting tribute to any UT success, and every sale brings in $25 for your University.

To learn how to get yours, call the alumni office at (813) 253-6209, or e-mail alumni@ut.edu.

(Florida residents only)

Got A Lot on Your Plate?
